

Legal Disclaimer

www.bernsteinlaw.com contains general information about legal matters. This information is not advice and should not be treated as such. The content on this site is offered only as a public service to the internet community and does not constitute solicitation or provision of legal advice. This site should not be used as a substitute for obtaining legal advice from an attorney licensed or authorized to practice in your jurisdiction. You should always consult a suitably qualified attorney regarding any specific legal problem or matter. The comments and opinions expressed on this site are of the individual author and may not reflect the opinions of the firm or any individual attorney.

Nothing on this site is intended to create an attorney-client relationship and nothing posted constitutes legal advice. Neither the transmission of the information contained on this site nor your use of the information or communication with Bernstein-Burkley, P.C. creates an attorney-client relationship between you and the firm. No information submitted on any internet form to Bernstein-Burkley, P.C. through this site will be protected by either the attorney-client privilege or the work product doctrine.

If you choose to email anyone through this site, do not include any confidential, secret or otherwise sensitive information concerning any potential or actual legal matter in the email transmission. Unsolicited emails do not create an attorney-client relationship and confidential or secret information included in such emails cannot be protected from disclosure. The owners of and contributors to this site have no duty to keep confidential any information you provide them.

An attorney-client relationship can only be created by the mutual assent of both parties and only after a consultation. Bernstein-Burkley, P.C. cannot agree to be retained as counsel until a complete conflict check and an engagement letter has been signed. This site is owned and maintained by Bernstein-Burkley, P.C.